Comparing April to May, 44 counties experienced rate increases, while two counties saw rate declines. York County registered the largest decline of 0.8%. Conversely, Allendale County had the largest increase in the unemployment rate at 2.5%. Over the year, 25 counties have seen declines, seven with no change, and 14 had increases. Horry, Anderson, and Charleston counties have seen the largest improvement in employment. Aiken, Richland, and Orangeburg counties have seen the largest declines.

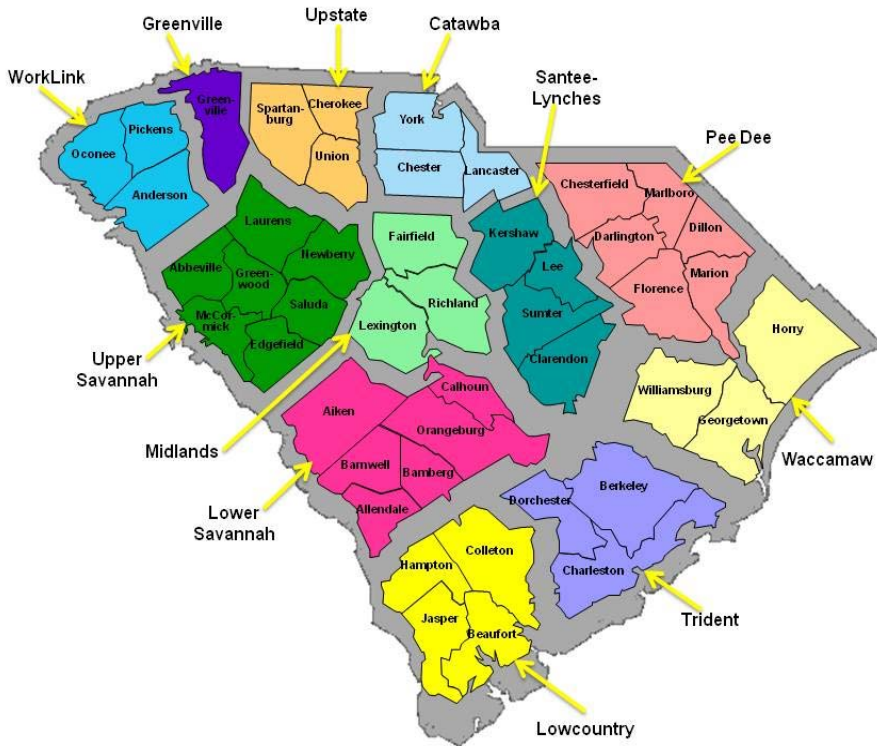

With summer approaching, counties where tourist-related activities provide a larger impact on the local economies should see improving conditions.

South Carolina Industry Direction

South Carolina’s nonfarm job count (not seasonally adjusted) increased 5,200 over April’s level. Industries with the largest over-the-month job gains were primarily in Leisure & Hospitality (+6,600), Retail Trade (+3,000), and Manufacturing (+1,200). Focusing on Manufacturing, the state’s average weekly manufacturing hours worked increased 0.5 hours over the past year to approximately 43.0 hours—an increase of almost 1.2%. Average hourly manufacturing earnings are up 3.3% as compared to a year ago.

Of the state’s MSAs, Charleston had the largest gain (+3,400), followed by Myrtle Beach (+3,300), and Columbia (+1,100) from April to May. Florence (+300) registered a smaller gain, while Greenville was relatively flat. On the other hand, contractions were noted in Spartanburg, Sumter, and Anderson.

Over the year, nonfarm jobs increased an estimated 4,400. Since reaching a low point in January of 2010, the state has added approximately 4.12% more jobs to the payrolls. These gains can be attributed to hiring in the Private Sector as it has seen an increase of 28,000 over the year. Administrative & Support Services (+10,400); Trade, Transportation & Utilities (+6,900); and Manufacturing (+6,400) accounted for the majority of those gains over the year. Federal, state and local government saw job declines (-24,000). Looking toward the summer months, we expect tourism-related activities to increase as local Government employment tightens due to schools reducing their payrolls during those months.
