

Lucas Ahmed - 36

“When I tell people I’m a baker, they usually think about someone baking cookies in their house or maybe for a small neighborhood bakery. No one usually thinks about baking in a factory. While machines do a lot of the work of measuring and mixing, I help to ensure our recipes are specifically crafted for large scale production.

I also assist our Research and Development team in designing and testing new cookie flavors that you may see on your grocery store shelves 12 to 18 months later! It is pretty amazing to see something you created for sale at the store.”
