

Derek Price - 30

“Jobs for call center reps are huge right now! I got laid off during COVID and found what I thought was a temporary job with a call center. With a little training from the company, I could work from home and build experience in the field.

I currently work in a call center for a major US airline, and I have the opportunity to help people get their travel arrangements worked out. It can get tense sometimes with certain customers, but if you have patience and empathy for their situation, you can usually find a solution that works for them. I like the flexibility that provides me as well as being able to take different shifts rather than always 9 to 5.
